Foreword

Conrad Guettler, Editor

As we approach our 50th Anniversary, the College has become a much more colourful place with the regularly-changing exhibitions organised by our Fine Arts Committee. As the resident Wolfson community is only a small percentage of the recipients of this Review, I would like to draw your attention to the fact that everybody can now see the exhibits at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/fine-arts; and similarly for colourful photographs of the Wolfson Gardens, go to www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/gardens

The College website, under the ‘Academic Life’ heading, also gives full details of all the many lectures and seminars held at Wolfson. Many of these have been recorded and are available as podcasts so that our readers can listen to them wherever they may be: www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/podcasts

I mentioned last year that we strive to put together a representative list of ‘Books by College Members’ but I remain certain that we are missing out on many because we haven’t heard about them. Our listing of books obviously does not include journal articles, but I am pleased to report that we will soon create a web page presenting an ongoing list of refereed papers published by the Wolfson community. The criteria for inclusion are necessarily fluid, but essentially we are looking to include our members’ best or most interesting papers. So please do tell us about your publications!

Having become involved in organising the Wolfson College Chamber Singers’ trip to France, I now realise how much effort goes into organising all the various Wolfson events and activities that take place at College and around the world in any given Term. The range of activities in College varies depending on how active a given Club or Society is – but this is not surprising given the way our student body changes every year.

All at College owe a great debt of gratitude to the many students, members and staff who get involved in one way or another. And that includes me as Editor; I am grateful to everybody who has contributed to this Wolfson Review. My special thanks must go to the Alumni & Development team for all their support in verifying facts, assembling diverse information, careful proof-reading and sourcing photographs, and to Kim Allen, Sue Sang and Michelle Searle for collating the student, visitor and University lists.

From the President

Professor Sir Richard Evans considers the business of College governance.

As I reach the midway point in my term of office as President – prescribed in the College Statutes as a non-renewable stint of seven years – it seems a good time to take stock. Looking through the following pages, it is clear that Wolfson is a lively, energetic and increasingly self-confident place, buzzing with activities and ideas.

Sometimes our colleagues in Oxford (‘The Other Place’) write off Cambridge Colleges – which have less individual power in our more centrally-administered University than in their more decentralised environment – as little more than dormitories, but anyone reading this Review will soon be disabused of any such notion. We offer not just somewhere to live, but also somewhere to engage in a huge range of activities – sporting, cultural, artistic, musical, social and intellectual. We aim to provide a second home, especially to students whose time at Cambridge is their first stay overseas, but we also provide a whole lot more, as the many articles and reports in this edition of the Review make clear.

Each Cambridge College is a charitable body with its own set of Statutes, which have to be voted through by the Governing Body of the College and approved by the Privy Council and the Queen. The Statutes provide a framework of basic rules of governance for the College and allocate functions to the Governing Body and the Council, lay down the terms and conditions of offices, and deal with similar fundamental matters. Over the past decades, the Statutes have been revised several times, but in some areas, such as financial and investment management, they have failed to keep up with modern practice, while in others anomalies and contradictions have appeared as a result of the successive amendments that have been introduced.

So over the past year we have been busy drafting a wholesale revision of the Statutes, shortening and simplifying them, removing anomalies and bringing them into line with today’s world of higher education. I am glad to say the arduous process of revision is now complete, and the new Statutes are being forwarded to the Privy Council for approval. I hope this will enable the College to function smoothly and effectively over the coming decades as a democratic institution where the rights and privileges of all its members are effectively defended in law.
Approaching our 50th Anniversary

In 2015, Wolfson College with reach its 50th Anniversary. As we approach this historic moment, three College Officers report on this year’s developments.

Christopher Lawrence, Bursar

The Finances

The value of the College’s investment portfolio passed the £15m mark for the first time in 2013 as a result of good investment growth and capital additions. The regular income from the endowment and invested reserves plays an important part in the financial health of the College, not least in terms of our ability to support students with scholarships, bursaries, travel/conference grants and hardship grants. Further support in this area is much needed and forms the cornerstone of our 50th Anniversary fundraising campaign. Total operating income was just under £6m, with additional income from donations and grants of £0.9m. The College continues to manage its financial resources wisely, making investment in students and the student experience a priority. You can find out more about the College’s finances from the published accounts at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/accounts

The College Estate

Following the comprehensive refurbishment of A and B block in 2013, generously funded by the Wolfson Foundation, the plan had been to turn to M, N, O, P block in 2014. However, a pressing need to upgrade the electrical supply infrastructure in the central part of the College was identified, and this work was scheduled for the summer of 2014, thus postponing further refurbishment work to 2015. Minor works carried out during the year included replacing the lift in the main building and changing its use from solely a goods lift to a public lift for all to use; and resurfacing the main drive. The gardens continue to be a source of joy to all those who live and work at Wolfson, with the show of colours in the Spring of 2014 being particularly remarkable.

The Staff

As ever, none of the progress made at Wolfson in the last year would have been possible without its staff. There are just under 100 permanent staff at the College, a mixture of full- and part-time, working across a wide range of departments, looking after the needs of students, Fellows, visitors and other members of the Wolfson ‘family’. The College seems to be fuelled by good quality food, and for many years now we have had Ray Palmer, the Executive Chef, to... thank for that. Ray first came to Wolfson in 1975 before leaving in 1985 to spend 10 years training the next generation of chefs, many of whom can now be found in senior roles at other Cambridge Colleges. Ray returned to Wolfson in 1995 and led our catering operation until his retirement in July 2014. Ray will be much missed – and his sweets and puddings even more! – but we are fortunate to have been able to find his successor, Helen Trundley, from within his team, and Helen will be well placed to continue Ray’s legacy at Wolfson.

Jane McLarty, Senior Tutor

This year I start my report with our undergraduate students: although we are often referred to as a ‘graduate College’ in recognition that this group forms the majority of our student body, this is in some sense a misnomer – we are a ‘mature’ College, with around 170 undergraduates over 21. Last year our undergraduate body performed magnificently in their examinations: over 18% were awarded firsts. We have had a very successful admissions season for October 2014 entry, and we will probably be somewhat over our target of around 50 new mature undergraduates this year. To make room for these extra undergraduates we will reduce the number of offers made to MPhil students for the coming year, which means that our proportion of students staying for three years and longer will increase: it is in the main these students who have the time to contribute to College life by, for instance, joining WCSA Committees or participating in sporting or musical activities.

All Colleges will be joining forces with the University to try to improve the experience of those on one-year taught courses, following disappointing feedback for Cambridge in the Postgraduate Taught Experience Survey this year. A new system of reporting (planned for Michaelmas 2014) during a student’s first Term will involve student, College and Department in trying to pick up problems early while there is still time to rectify them.

Our part-time graduate students are another large constituency (some 250 students) with a relatively low profile because they are in College for far more limited periods: this Term, Colleges who take significant numbers of part-time students met to discuss how we can help these students feel more included in College life. Better liaison with University departments seems to be one key to this.

Attracting more PhD students to put Wolfson as first or second choice continues to be a challenge. Our offer of up to three years’ accommodation is one of the best in Cambridge, and through the tireless work of the Development Office we are gradually increasing the amount and number of scholarships we can offer students. We need to publicise better all that we offer in College, from grants for conference and research expenses through to our Skills for Academic Success sessions. Wolfson has a strong offering for graduate students, and we should be proud of it.
Karen Stephenson, Development Director

It has been a pleasure to meet even more College members this year, as we continue the preparations for Wolfson’s 50th Anniversary in 2015.

During the Easter vacation, the President, Dr Corton and I visited alumni and friends of the College in Singapore, Kuala Lumpur, Sunway, Tokyo, Beijing and Hong Kong. The President gave a lecture in each location on ‘1914/2014: A Warning from History?’ The tour, to launch the 50th Anniversary Campaign in Asia, was a wonderful opportunity to build Wolfson connections and we are enormously grateful to all members who assisted and sponsored College events and accommodation. It is also marvellous that so many of those we met have given very generously to the Campaign: philanthropy on this scale will make a real difference to our students now and in the future.

By the end of the 2013–2014 financial year, we will have been able to grant over £200,000 to our students for scholarships and prizes, as well as for conference and hardship grants. We have also been able to improve our student accommodation, providing modern facilities with a smaller carbon footprint suitable for today’s students. None of this would have been possible without the generosity of our members. You can read more about the Campaign at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/alumni/50th_Anniversary Please do contact the College if you can help us on development@wolfson.cam.ac.uk or you may wish to complete the donation form at the end of this Review or make your gift online at www.WolfsonGiving.com

WOLF5ON

Celebrations and academic events to mark the 50th Anniversary in 2015 will take place throughout the calendar year. The focus of the festivities will be a weekend-long celebration on 4 and 5 July 2015, when all Wolfson members will be invited to return to College and commemorate this momentous point in our history. There will be a keynote lecture from the President, a dinner in marquees set in the College grounds, a Sunday-morning concert and a garden party. Invitations will be sent at the end of 2014 and online booking will be available.

“The focus of the festivities will be a weekend-long celebration on 4 and 5 July 2015”

The celebrations for 2015 will begin with a new event for Wolfson alumni living in Cambridge. We have over 400 such members, and a festive cocktail reception will be held to launch the Cambridge Wolfson Alumni Group. Details of other Wolfson groups around the world can be found at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/alumni/associations We hope that our overseas groups will also mark this important anniversary with fundraising events and celebrations: please contact alumni@wolfson.cam.ac.uk to discuss your plans.
Our ‘Wolfson in 50 words’ project is also gaining momentum. You can see entries received so far at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/alumni/50words Please let us have your own record, in 50 words, of what Wolfson means to you and send it to communications@wolfson.cam.ac.uk

Also being planned is a series of 10 high-profile lectures by Wolfson speakers on the last 50 years in their subject. The lectures are listed in the calendar on the back cover and speakers include Professor Conor Gearty (1980), Professor of Law at the London School of Economics, and the University’s Vice-Chancellor, Wolfson Fellow and Honorary Fellow, Professor Sir Leszek Borysiewicz (1988). The lectures will be recorded and available online so that all members will be able to participate.

2015 events will also take place in the USA, Germany and the UK. Invitations will be sent by email to members in each area, so please send your up-to-date contact details to communications@wolfson.cam.ac.uk

The Lent Term Concert on 15 March will take the form of a ‘Come and Sing’ with a vocal workshop and alumni celebration concert conducted by Lynette Alcántara, our Director of Music. Please complete the questionnaire online at bit.ly/1tmjquP if you are interested in taking part.

All event and booking details will be listed at www.WolfsonEvents.com as they become available, so do check the calendar regularly.

Wolfson College has, over 50 years, built a unique place at the heart of the University of Cambridge, and Wolfson alumni – national leaders, senior judges, leading cultural figures, academics and entrepreneurs – have gone on, in their own ways, to change the world. Please do join us in the celebrations for our first 50 years, and help us to maintain this excellence into the future.

“None of this would have been possible without the generosity of our members”
A Eurosceptic Nation?

Benjamin Grob-Fitzgibbon (2013) is the Cleveland C. Burton Professor of International Programs at the University of Arkansas. Here he describes his research as a Visiting Fellow (which will be published in a book The British and Europe).

As an historian of contemporary Britain, I am sometimes struck by how quickly events unfolding around me become part of my teaching and research. One such occasion was in the early hours of 26 May 2014 as I watched the results trickling in from the European elections.

No one could deny it was a major historical event, a ‘political earthquake’ as many on the BBC called it. For the first time in over 100 years, neither the Conservatives nor the Labour Party had won a national election and the Liberal Democrats – the most explicitly ‘European’ party – were relegated to fifth place, losing all but one of their seats in the European Parliament.

Britain had come a long way since Winston Churchill delivered his famous 1946 speech in Zurich calling for a United States of Europe, the two Haralds (Macmillan and Wilson) campaigned for British entry into the EEC and Margaret Thatcher donned a jumper emblazoned with all the flags of the Community whilst calling for Britain to stay in ‘Europe’ in the 1975 referendum campaign.

The historian can make a strong case that Britain was, for much of the post-war period, a ‘European’ country. The more vexing question is how (and when) Britain ceased to identify as such, to instead become a Eurosceptic one. It is this difficult problem that I have grappled with at Wolfson.

The answer seems to be a complicated mix of economics, politics and national identity. In the immediate aftermath of the Second World War, many within Britain expected the UK to remain one of the ‘Big Three’, the British Empire lasting for Churchill’s ‘thousand years’. So long as Britons remained imperial, they could simultaneously embrace a European identity and seek to lead an integrated Europe.

Yet, as empire collapsed, not only was Britain’s economy imperilled, but questions of national identity came to the fore. Whilst those within Scotland and Wales could turn to a pre-imperial past for solace, in England the future was less clear. When various governments sought entry into the fledgling EEC to meet the economic challenge, ‘Europe’ seemed an unwanted replacement for empire, and a post-imperial Euro-scepticism was born.
Here is my story: I was born in Iran and raised in a moderately religious Iranian environment. During my childhood and adolescence, I never received proper sex education, neither from my family nor school. Sexual issues were something not to be discussed and I grew up with too many unanswered questions.

I was admitted to study clinical medicine at the University of Tehran. Having been raised in a Muslim environment and being a practising medical doctor, I observed the shortcomings in effectively helping Iranian people on issues concerning sexual and marital health and satisfaction. Therefore, against all the odds, I moved to the UK with my (newly-wed) wife to seek training with the aim of becoming a sexual health specialist who can support individuals, couples and families in their sexual, relational and marital difficulties. I was admitted to the Porterbrook Clinic in Sheffield, received my qualification in sex and relationship therapy and started practising for a while. With a doctorate in clinical medicine, I initially had no intention to do a PhD, let alone in the field of education, which was a huge shift for me from clinical practice to the social sciences. But as a clinical sexologist, I had increasingly become aware that inadequate education regarding sexual and relational matters made a massive contribution to the development of sexual problems. I learnt that the basis of anything constructive to be done for satisfying sexual relationships should be rooted in education. I had already had previous experience in the education sector as an instructor and consultant in schools. Hence, I decided to involve myself academically in the field of education in order to tackle sexual health in a more fundamental and constructive way. In 2010, I was admitted to the Faculty of Education as a graduate student to investigate issues that concern sexual health and education in Muslim young people. We moved to Cambridge and, luckily, Wolfson became our host.

I am now in the final year of my PhD and Wolfson has been a cosy home for me and my wife. We both appreciate its peaceful and relaxing environment and its spectacular gardens, as well as the varied social life – I could not live without my singing.
My life since Wolfson

Forty years after Wolfson, celebrated designer of ‘green’ skyscrapers and Wolfson alumnus Dato’ Dr Ken Yeang (1971) recently gave a lecture at an alumni gathering in Kuala Lumpur. The meeting left him wondering whether he should go back to academia.

In the week I left Wolfson in the mid-seventies, I flew to Kuala Lumpur to start work, on the day after arrival, at a large architect firm. It was an instantaneous displacement – straight from the comfort of College to traumatically entering a fast-moving, commercially-driven developing world in the Far East.

Before Wolfson and architectural school in London, I had been to Cheltenham College public school, and perhaps my most relevant formative experience was an appreciation of the quirky British sense of humour, which made this transition bearable. The exposure to strict academia at Wolfson and being a Cambridge alumnus gave me a slight social edge in status and a certainty which I would not have, had I been a totally home-grown professional or had attended a lesser university.

A year after starting work in Malaysia and still innocently foolish, I left the security of the firm to start a practice as an architect, together with a former colleague I had befriended at architectural school. My subsequent doctoral dissertation rekindled a keen interest in research and I continue to research all aspects of ecological design – even though professional architectural practice is really much more of a craft.

Publishing articles on my work progressed to authoring my first book on urban design a couple of years later, and my dissertation was also published. Since then I have written several monographs on theoretical aspects of green architecture, concurrently while running a busy architectural practice. Twelve books later, I seem to have acquired a profile which has kept me busy on the international lecture circuit.

Looking back, perhaps the biggest impact of my time at Wolfson was acquiring an interest in research, and continuing to put the principles of my dissertation on ecological design into practice. In the mid-seventies my work was certainly not as topical as it is today – then I was regarded with suspicion as a displaced hippie! My original research has now become my life’s agenda which drives the design work in my architectural practice today – and in many ways this gives it a competitive business edge.

What next – should I go back to academia?

Humour as history? First World War cartoons from the trenches

Since 2011, College Research Associate Jane Chapman (1971) and her AHRC-funded team have been researching, as a cultural record, comics produced during the World Wars. The publications they have studied include soldiers’ own cartoons in trench journals from World War One. These were the subject of a talk she gave in a Wolfson Lunchtime Seminar.

Trench newspapers or trench journals were news-sheets, magazines and similar periodicals produced by the soldiers themselves, often within the range of the guns at the front. Troops of all nationalities produced them during the War, and almost 1,000 titles still exist in archives and libraries, including Cambridge University Library.
Although textual expressions by the armed forces in their own trench and troopship newspapers are relatively well known, the way that the men created and used the cartoon multi-panel format is not. Humorous visual self-expression provides a record of satirical social observation from a ‘bottom up’ perspective. I would argue that the contribution made by these hundreds of illustrative narratives during World War One needs to be acknowledged as early citizen journalism. Soldiers’ universal concerns about daily life, complaints and feelings about officers, medical services, discomforts, food and drink, leave, military routines and their expectations versus emerging reality are all emphasised.

Cartoons were created as a satirical reaction to the patriotism and political rhetoric of the home-front mainstream press. Their content was inspired by daily events and inside jokes about life at the front. Through their newspaper articles, letters to the editor, doggerel verse, poetry, jokes, spoof advertisements and cartoons, the soldiers satirised and ridiculed the hardships of war.

As historical sources, written and drawn by the men for the men themselves unlike the poems by officers like Wilfred Owen or Siegfried Sassoon, the cartoons in trench newspapers show the concerns and the lives of the soldiers themselves. Much of the visual comedy in these cartoons was common to all troops serving during the War whatever the theatre, their unit or indeed their nationality.

The concerns that emerge from the cartoons in Australian, Canadian, New Zealand and British publications were similar: food, drink, leave, inadequate medical facilities, hierarchical military discipline and seemingly pointless routine.

Teacher leadership in Portugal

Liz Brown, Robyn Gilbert, Sophie Horncastle, Liza Timpson, Kanchana Gamage, Beth Roberts Jones and Jo Ryan, HertsCam MEd students

In May we travelled to the University of Minho, Braga to participate in a remarkable two-day teacher leadership event with a grant from the Wolfson Travel Fund. We were part of a 14-strong group from the HertsCam Network which has been led by Wolfson members for the last 14 years. The first day featured a seminar involving 70 teachers, head-teachers, university staff and research students. It began with the presentation of findings from a three-year investigation of teachers’ professionalism by Portuguese academics. Wolfson Fellow David Frost, our network co-ordinator, gave a keynote address which provoked a lively debate about the struggle between demoralisation and hope: www.lflteacherleadership.org

The second day was for networking. We each presented our projects and discussed leading change in our schools. It was encouraging to see how our approach in HertsCam has been adopted by teachers in other countries and that problems facing teachers are similar. It was inspiring to see the reach of the International Teacher Leadership initiative which started at Wolfson in 2008.

The Library

Meg Westbury, Lee Seng Tee Librarian

The Wolfson College Library continues to be a well-loved and much-used institution. As I write, every desk is filled with hard-working students managing piles of notes, books, multiple electronic devices and an assortment of helpful amenities such as jars of coffee, alarm clocks and massage balls! It’s gratifying that students continue to find the space a productive place to work.

When I started as the new Lee Librarian in November 2013, I inherited a friendly and well-run library from my predecessors Jenny Sargent and Anna Jones. I have come to appreciate the love and dedication these two librarians have put into developing the services and collections over the years, and I hope to build on their successes.

Running a library is an ever-evolving role based on the changing needs of how students find, consume and manage information. Twenty years ago, few could have predicted the wealth of online information now at our fingertips, the rate of development of social media or the open-access publishing movement. As a librarian, my central concern is to understand how Wolfson students navigate the plethora of available scholarly resources and to provide tools and information that make this sometimes confusing process easier.

I continue to purchase many books, mainly to support taught undergraduate and postgraduate courses, but I also have been expanding other services: this spring, I offered new classes on referencing and plagiarism, using Zotero for referencing, academic blogging, Twitter for research and managing one’s LinkedIn profile.

I have also been involved in some Cambridge-wide efforts to improve information about finding scholarly resources on the University Library Gateway and the new University-wide virtual learning environment, as well as helping to share good practice among College Librarians in my new role as Convenor of the Cambridge College Libraries Forum.

Finally, I have a strong interest in how and why students use the space of the Lee Library. They have many choices of where to work, so why choose our Library and how best make the space conducive to learning? Over the next year, I hope to put more comfortable seating throughout the Library, reduce noise from the foyer and improve the flooring, lighting and furniture in the ground-floor rooms.
The College Archive

Frieda Midgley, Archivist and Records Manager

My first year as Archivist at Wolfson has been a wonderful voyage of discovery. I’ve been delighted to find that we have a very full photographic record of the development of the College buildings, and even a number of video recordings of significant events in the life of the College, including the Royal Opening in 1977. We also have a series of 29 oral history interviews, conducted by Emeritus Fellow Bill Kirkman, which have now been transcribed so that we can make full use of these fascinating accounts of the development of the College, its characters and its culture.

To celebrate the centenary of Bredon House, which was built in 1914, I put together an exhibition charting its transformation from family home to the heart of Wolfson College. Bredon House was built for Professor of Zoology John Stanley Gardiner (1872–1946), biochemist Edith Gertrude Gardiner (née Willcock, 1879-1953) and their two daughters Nancy (1911-c.1955) and Joyce (1913-1994). We are particularly fortunate that the family has given us photograph albums, paintings and even writings by Edith Gardiner, which give some wonderful insights into their life in the house, from the antics of the gardener, to accounts of raising pigs for food production and experiencing their first Zeppelin raid.

Do look out for exhibitions of material from the College archives at alumni and benefactors’ events, and for a special exhibition on the history of the College for our 50th Anniversary in 2015. I will also be developing exhibition galleries on the College website at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/fine-arts

I am keen that the 50th Anniversary exhibition should reflect not just the formal life of the College, but the great variety of the College experience. If you have items that you think might be of interest (such as posters, leaflets and programmes produced by Wolfson Clubs and Societies, photographs or even audio and video recordings), I would love to hear about them: archivist@wolfson.cam.ac.uk
That’s All Folks

Our Executive Chef Ray Palmer (1975) wrote an article for the then College Magazine 19 years ago, on his return to Wolfson. Now he is writing as his retirement is imminent.

For 47 years I have been working in an industry that has changed beyond all recognition from when I started in the mid-1960s. The first restaurant that I noticed was opened in our town by an Italian family and once, when walking past it, I was aware of this amazing smell. This was my Proustian moment, not of a tea-soaked madeleine, but of garlic frying in butter.

What gave me my initial interest in cooking was helping my mother and grandmother in the kitchen at home. Our whole year was structured around the planting, harvesting and cooking of fruit and vegetables. And I’m still doing this: the pudding at last year’s Alumni Reunion Dinner was Wild Bramble Brulée with the brambles picked from the by-ways of Cambridge; each autumn I make quince jelly from the tree in the President’s garden and come spring, elderflowers are turned into cordial for a fragrant soft drink. In summer, cherries are picked at Quy Fen and bottled in alcohol for decoration on desserts. And my grandmother’s Christmas pudding recipe is the one I use each year for the 112 puddings made for sale and use at Christmas functions.

Ray Palmer with the menu he prepared for Her Majesty the Queen during her visit to Wolfson in 1977.
After a two-year catering course at Croydon Technical College I worked at a number of hotels and, in the early 1970s, I moved to Cambridge to work as the Pastry Chef at the Garden House Hotel. Sadly the Hotel suddenly went into receivership and I had to find a new job.

Thus I arrived at Wolfson in July 1975 as Head Chef, leading a team of one plus a part-time cook. Soon, the main College building opened containing a new kitchen and, a year later, Her Majesty the Queen opened the College and had lunch with 150 guests in the Dining Hall. My overriding impression of those early years was the informality and friendliness of everyone, with students and staff both mixing socially. The Catering department was kept running by the co-operation of friends and families. We had three generations of one family washing up in the evenings after Formal Halls; husbands and wives have worked together and their sons and daughters have worked here during or after their parents have left. It was the variety of the work which attracted me and the reason why I stayed for 10 years, as I could cook whatever I liked and so I tried out as many different dishes as possible.

Then, in need of a change, I joined Cambridge Regional College (CRC) as a lecturer in Catering which brought home to me just how much there was to learn about cooking. Whilst teaching others, I also improved my own skills, taking advanced bakery and pastry courses. However, the catering students were not that motivated and the daily paperwork required was somewhat overwhelming. So I took the opportunity of going to New Zealand for a year on a job exchange. The students there were very enthusiastic and this made returning to CRC more than a little dispiriting. So it was something of a relief when Wolfson recruited me as Executive Chef! College had become a lot bigger since my earlier days, but with a still small enough Catering team to feel immediately at home. And whilst many things had changed, I was surprised at how familiar everything felt.

There are many things I will miss about Wolfson: the community of staff and College members, of course, and the cooking too. I won’t miss my early arrival at 6.15am but the routine of opening up the kitchen, unlocking the cold-rooms, making a cup of coffee, putting on my Chef’s uniform, checking emails and signing invoices before the rest of the Catering team arrives has become a kind of ritual.

It has been said that for many students, the time spent at Wolfson College was ‘a life-changing experience’. That is also true for me, as in 1982 I met a postgraduate student of Wolfson – and we have been partners ever since.

The most that anyone can hope for on leaving a job is that they leave it in a better shape than when they started. I hope that I have achieved this but now it is up to another, younger team to move the department into a new era. I believe they will prove more than a match for this.

Citizen media and the fourth estate

Press Fellow Cindy Yeap (2013) is Deputy Editor (Capital Markets & Companies) for The Edge, the leading business weekly in Malaysia.

Everyone can write, and proponents of ‘citizen journalism’ will say the process of recording and sharing what doesn’t feel quite right is journalism. The footage of Ian Tomlinson’s mistreatment at a G20 protest in London shortly before he died, sent by an American fund manager to The Guardian in 2009, is cited as an example of the rise of citizen media and how technology is changing the future of news.

It is precisely because of this great surge in information that quality journalism is needed more than ever. Not everyone will deliver the kind of journalism required for the media to be a genuine fourth estate because the alternative is easier. There’s plenty of evidence of how the press is increasingly compromised, due to sheer lack of time, by relying on public relations material and questionable news sources. What is worse, because blogs are presenting what is ‘too good to check’, newspapers now have to decide whether to go down that path or risk losing readers should rival publications do so.

I’d like to think that discerning readers choose newspapers they trust to have checked the facts. The chances are that even quality bloggers, some of whom are not anonymous, also read the quality press. I believe there will always be people who value trustworthy information, because a society without enough citizens who read and think is done for.

Marketing and Finance will probably say journalism needs more people willing to pay the price of a decent coffee for The Financial Times or for The Guardian’s brand of quality journalism. Alas, the latter are a minority. For me, it is quality investigative and data journalism that needs defending, and Wolfson College has been helping for over three decades. Through its Press Fellowship, over 310 journalists from 46 countries have been empowered by gaining access to the vast knowledge-base at Cambridge.

I’m told Cambridge will probably never have a journalism school, so that makes the Wolfson Press Fellowship even more special.
Wolfson gardens: ‘True Blue’, the Holy Grail for rose breeders

Philip Stigwood, Head Gardener

Roses come in many colours and forms except for the ‘True Blue’ colour. This is the Holy Grail for Rose breeders, as a true blue rose would be a bestseller and highly desirable.

Blue roses do not exist in nature as they lack the specific gene that produces true blue petals. Many roses have been bred and sold as a ‘blue type’, but none are truly blue. These include ‘Blue Moon’ (lilac-mauve), ‘Blue For You’ (purple-mauve), and ‘Rhapsody In Blue’ (iridescent purple). Many florists sell blue roses whose white petals have been dyed electric blue!

In 2004, a Japanese company managed to insert the blue gene delphinidin from petunia into a white rose and the resulting colour was disappointingly lilac-mauve. There was clearly some pink colouration in the genes of the white rose. The geneticists then inserted the blue pigment from pansies into a purple rose, but this genetically-modified rose has not been a success because it is very expensive and the public are not convinced that it is a real ‘true blue’.

Over the past two to three years, we have planted many roses of the ‘new English’ kind bred by David Austin which combine the delicious old rose fragrance and complex flower with a long repeat-flowering season from June to September (unlike the old English roses which flower only once for a few weeks). Amongst the new roses are ‘Winchester Cathedral’ (white, Chancellor’s Centre), ‘Morning Mist’ (peach/salmon, Western Field courtyard and Sundial Garden border), ‘Strawberry Hill’ (pink, near wisteria pergola), ‘Graham Thomas’ (yellow, Western Field courtyard), ‘Golden Celebration’ (gold, Morrison House), ‘LD Braithwaite’ (rich crimson) and ‘Maid Marion’ (pink), both in Lee Court.

For many years, the College gardens were lacking in the most important scent of all, the scent of roses, but not any more. All of our new roses were chosen because they received the highest awards from the Royal Horticultural Society and because of their fantastic scent. Enjoy them and keep an eye out for a ‘True Blue’ rose in the future!

Lee Seng Tee Distinguished Lecture 2014: The flesh is weak: a history of pain from the 1760s to the present

Professor Joanna Bourke is Professor of History at Birkbeck College, University of London, and is well-known as author of The Story of Pain: From Prayer to Painkillers. She gave the seventh lecture in this series on 1 May 2014. The series was endowed by Dr Lee Seng Tee on the occasion of the College’s 40th Anniversary in 2005; recordings of all the lectures are available at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/lee-lecture. Here Professor Bourke provides a summary of her lecture.

Pain is “like a storm”, observed the distinguished surgeon René Leriche in 1939, in which the patient is “beyond all capability of analysing it”. Taming this storm was a task fraught with anxiety for physicians as well as patients.

One of the major debates about encounters between patients and physicians concerns the function and reliability of pain narratives in aiding the diagnosis of illness. Is there any value in listening to how patients describe their pain? Between the mid-eighteenth century and the present, there has been a major shift in the answer given to this question.

When pain narratives were valued as contributing to accurate diagnosis – as well as being an integral part of the healing process itself – they were encouraged, elicited and elaborated upon. The act of communication itself was posited as a sign of hope, for patients and physicians alike. Increasingly, however, from the nineteenth century on, pain narratives were stripped of any significance beyond the rudimentary information imparted by the cry “But it hurts, here!” Pain narratives became mere ‘noise’, serving little diagnostic purpose. Rhetorical flourishes were increasingly side-lined, even discouraged. For clinicians, the person’s misery was reduced to its separate component parts (nervous, visceral, chemical, neurological and so on) within the physiological body. Protracted grumbling by patients was little more than an impediment to the future ‘conquest of pain’. For patients, complex and elaborate pain narratives became shameful (might their very ‘richness’ indicate malingering, exaggeration or liability?) and potentially indicative of their status as ‘bad patients’.

There are many reasons for the ‘thinning’ languages of pain in clinical settings, including the introduction of diagnostic classification systems and changing medical technologies, which effectively rendered patients’ descriptions of pain more peripheral to the healing process. Anaesthetics silenced the acute pain sufferer; effective analgesics blunted the minds of chronic... sufferers. Knowledge taken from microbiology, chemistry and physiology enabled physicians to bypass patient narratives in their search for an ‘objective diagnosis’. In addition, medical commentators identified three fundamental problems with pain narrative: the complexity of the body, the untrustworthiness of patients and the inherent difficulties of language.

From the late-twentieth century, pain languages have been revived with the creation of the McGill Pain Questionnaire, which seeks to put words into patients’ mouths. This attempt to give patients a language to speak about pain is highly prescriptive, nonetheless. Lengthy, narrative-driven stories like the kind promoted in earlier centuries are jettisoned for (largely) adjectival lists. In fact, despite the numerous difficulties people face when attempting to communicate their pain, many sufferers turn out to possess a much richer language for pain than is made available through the questionnaires.

At the other extreme, there has been the resolute stripping away of language with the introduction of Visual Analogue Scales (1 to 10) and the Holy Grail of objective detection of pain in brain imaging. In the latter case, the complex phenomenon of being-in-pain is reduced to one, rather small, part of painful experiences – and indeed a moment that the sufferer herself might not recognise as painful.
Humanities Society

Jane Chapman (1971), College Research Associate

This year, the Humanities Society has been in expansive mode, contributing intellectual content to the Cambridge Festival of Ideas, podcasts and new connections with other universities. Very often, talks have addressed big questions, such as the future of humanities, the nature of power and the true functions of education. These ambitions have been mirrored by a larger organising committee and higher regular attendance at the 21 events throughout the academic year.

We have defined our field broadly, to include politics, law history, fashion history, literature, visual arts, education and anthropology. This leads to Termly programmes with a huge variety of topics: a history of corsets and calories has shared a programme with visions of power, climate change and conspiracy, feudalism and Cold War survival, whilst the bohemians of Covent Garden have been scheduled along with a rogue judge, a Fiji exhibition and Allende’s Chile.

Some speakers can be described as rising stars, whilst others are already big names – such as Professor David Runciman, Professor Sir Tony Wrigley, Professor Chris Clark, Professor Philip Allott and our President, Professor Sir Richard Evans. All have, in different ways, provoked discussion, criticism and reflection.

As for awards, the prize for attracting an audience goes to Professor David Runciman, and for catchy wording of a title to ‘Fidgets, Scoundrels and Mummy’s Boys: Performing Masculinity in the Victorian House of Commons’ (Dr Ben Griffin), or possibly to ‘Wax, Wood and Narrative: the Miraculous Culture of Renaissance Italy’ (Dr Mary Laven). It is difficult to single out merit, or indeed to describe fully the enjoyment that we have all had. Yet I have to mention my volunteer co-organisers, without whom none of the above would have happened – Dr Christine Corton, Mr Sebastiaan Keibek, Ms Polly Dickson and Dr Elizabeth Blake – and to thank those who attend regularly. We continue to have fun, while raising the intellectual profile of the College.

Science Society

Karyn Mégy (2008), College Research Associate

The Science Society aims to explore various facets of science, for the benefit of members of the College and of the larger Cambridge community, and to encourage new journeys into science.

This year, our series took us from theoretical physics, with introductions to the origin and evolution of the universe (Professor John Barrow), the dark matter mystery (Professor Ben Allanach) and gravity and black holes (Dr Pau Figueras), to the applications of technology, with presentations on nanotechnologies in healthcare (Dr Luis Garcia-Gancedo), human-computer interaction (Dr Pradipta Biswas) and magnetic resonance imaging (Dr Nick Mantle).

We travelled from the traditional field of biology and cancer in the Tasmanian Devil (Dr Hannah Siddle) to the large but maybe less well-known territory of computational biology, where we learned of strange usages of the DNA code for storing data (Dr Nick Goldman) and finding a personal meaning in the human genome (Dr Manuel Corpas).

We even made an expedition to the extremes with non-scientific talks about the history and philosophy of Science (Dr Jenny Mander) and the harsh environment of Open Access in publishing (Dr Ben Johnson).

As our talks became more popular and exceeded the capacity of the Old Combination Room, we changed course and headed to the Seminar Room, as did our supplies of drinks and nibbles. All our talks are accessible to non-initiates – so whether it’s your first trip to the science world, or whether you are a seasoned traveller of that realm, join us on our next journey!

Details of the talks are available at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/science

Lunchtime Seminar Series

Meredith Hale (2009), Fellow

The Wolfson Lunchtime Seminar Series hosted speakers from a wide variety of backgrounds on equally varied subjects from post-Qadhafi Libya to the Wolfson gardens.

Archaeology was represented by: Mr David Jacques’ examination of a Mesolithic site near Stonehenge; Professor Phillip Lindley’s 3D scanning of Renaissance monuments in Framlingham; Dr Laurence Smith’s report on archaeological work in Suakin, Sudan; and Dr Shadia Taha’s consideration of Sudan’s cultural heritage.

Contemporary politics in Libya featured in PhD student Jason Pack’s talk, and the politics of education in Britain was discussed by Dr Steve Watson. The social sciences were represented by PhD student Xuan Li, comparing eastern and western parenting models, and Dr Richard Meiser-Stedman, considering post-traumatic stress in children and adolescents.

Europe featured prominently in this year’s series. PhD student Mathias Haeussler spoke on British membership of the EU; Dr Benjamin Grob-Fitzgibbon on ‘British approaches towards Europe in the post-war world’; Wolfson JRF Valia Babis on a solution to the EU’s banking troubles; and Professor Spyridon Flogaitis on ‘The Roman tradition and the rebirth of public powers in Europe’. Dr Alexander Geppert considered Europe’s space programme.

Historical subjects included Dr Anne-Christin Sass on ‘Eastern European Jews in Weimar Berlin’; Professor Stephen Ahern’s ‘Coming to Grips with Forced Migration: Attending to History and Discourse’; PhD candidate Nicholas Williams on historical memory in Las Terrazas, Cuba; Dr Charles Jones on the activism of four sisters in the Ashurst family; Professor Jane Chapman on First World War cartoons and Iain King CBE, former Press Fellow, on the philosophers of war.

Literature and philosophy were represented by PhD student Michael Engel’s ‘The Influence of Aristotle’s Psychological Theory on Late Medieval Philosophy’ and Professor Howard Wolf on creative non-fiction writing in post-1960s America.

Two seminars featured as part of our sub-series on Wolfson life: Head Gardener Philip Stigwood discussed the gardens; and Executive Chef Ray Palmer reflected on his time at Wolfson in ‘40 Years of Food’.

The seminars take place on Wednesdays during Term and we welcome contributions from all College members. Please suggest topics at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/lunchtime
Wolfson Research Event

Eli Keren (2013), Student and Wolfson Research Event Committee member

Last year’s success set the bar high for the 2014 Wolfson Research Event on 2 May – and the day left no-one disappointed. After an opening talk by our President, Professor Sir Richard Evans, and a keynote speech from Vice-President Professor John Naughton, we went right into our first talk of the day. Addressed to a full Lee Seng Tee Hall, talks were given by Wolfson students and invited students from St Antony’s Oxford on an excitingly diverse range of topics. We were given a taste of the hard sciences with biochemical computational simulations, introduced to the spiritual with a talk on what it means to be conscious, enjoyed a seamless merger of science and art in a talk on the fundamental difference between improvised and learned musical performance, and the field of history was represented by a talk on the relationship between God and justice hundreds of years ago. There really was something for everyone.

Between the oral presentation sessions, the audience was invited to refreshments as they explored an equally diverse array of interactive poster presentations. The concluding reception and Formal Hall gave our presenters a chance to relax and talk to their fellow researchers in a congenial environment.

Looking to next year, the 2015 Research Event will be held over two days and will have more speakers, topics and time to explore in detail the ways in which Wolfson students, and our contemporaries at St Antony’s, are making an impact on the world we live in. Next year, we hope for presentations from our Junior Research Fellows alongside our students, thus bridging the gap between subjects and experience.

Finally, the Committee would like to express its lasting gratitude to those who supported our endeavours, Dr Steve Hoath, Professor Ian Cross, Dr Elizabeth Blake and Dr Carmine D’Agostino, as well as to every student who gave an oral or poster presentation. We may have done the organising, but it was the presenters that came together to make it an event we can all remember. Here’s to next year.

Wolfson College Student Association

Alexandra (Sasha) East (2012), Student and WCSA President, and Toby Moncaster (2011), Student and WCSA Vice-President

WCSA has gone from strength to strength this year. On the social front, we’ve aimed to provide a broad range of events, from the traditional bops, regular swaps and annual Wolfson’s Got Talent competition, to quizzes, pool and darts evenings and even a cheese tasting! Events out of Term have catered especially for PhD students, and we embraced the College’s international character with an extremely popular Bollywood dance night and Chinese New Year celebrations. In Easter Term we focused on relaxation events to help with exam stress, such as a massage class and a ‘Pet-a-Puppy’ day, as well as initiating weekly welfare coffee sessions. We increased our visibility by launching a new website early in Easter Term and by engaging with our community via social media.

We’ve continued to work closely with College on matters affecting students. This has included providing feedback from a widespread catering survey, securing funding for a permanent barbeque in the Sundial Garden and providing a student voice on the many committees that are central to the smooth running of Wolfson.

Looking to the future, the impending changes in the College Statutes provide an opportunity to modernise WCSA’s own Constitution. We are also starting the process of preparing for a hectic Freshers’ Week – always an exciting time in Wolfson!
Skills for Academic Success

Gillian Sanders, Postgraduate Administrator

The invitation to “sign up for Wolfson Skills for Academic Success sessions – lively, practical and fun” signalled the renaming and launch of our new study skills programme, merging with the Thesis Writing Group. The programme has been put together by Jane McLarty (Senior Tutor), Sally Church (Tutor) and Lesley Dingle (Academic Support Officer) with input from Meg Westbury (Librarian) and assistance from myself.

Workshops take place on Thursdays during Term from 6–7pm. The sessions are informal, with refreshments provided, and everyone is encouraged to take part in friendly debate. They are designed to complement any subject-specific seminars offered in departments and, although the main focus is on skills for students, we also introduced topics to interest the wider Wolfson community.

We organised 15 presentations to help students sharpen up their writing, learn how to get their points across in a presentation and acquire tips for exam preparation. Speakers included College Research Associates, Librarians from the Lee Library and University Medical Library, University staff and academic visitors.

Workshops in Michaelmas included ‘Planning your Writing’ and ‘Revision and Exam Skills’ (Richard Berengarten) and ‘Oral Presentation Skills’ (Ana Luisa Toribio). Lent Term covered ‘The First Year Report’ (David Barrowclough); ‘Language and Style’ (Richard Berengarten); ‘How do I avoid plagiarism?’ and ‘Stress-Free Referencing with Zotero’ (Meg Westbury); ‘The ‘Big Four’ Databases for your Literature Search’ (Isla Kuhn); and ‘Improve your Scientific Writing’ (Mary Chester Kadwell).

Easter Term opened with ‘Cross-training for the Brain: an antidote for exam term stress’ (Melanie Taylor) which aimed to refresh students’ concentration with a mix of physical and verbal games. Meg Westbury ran three workshops demonstrating the benefits of blogging, LinkedIn and Twitter, which proved popular with visitors, members and students.

Florian Urmetzer’s workshop ‘Transition from Academia into Business – Applications, Processes, Thoughts’ shed light on this significant step, while ‘Preparing for the Viva from the Examiner’s Perspective’ (Michael Langford) provided insights into a successful viva.

We wish to thank all the speakers and our students whose support made the programme such a success. We welcome suggestions for future topics to pgadministrator@wolfson.cam.ac.uk
Wolfson Music Society

Andrew Goldman (2010), Student and Society President

The Music Society has continued to provide opportunities to participate in College music-making and to host concerts by professional musicians for its three concert series. The Lunchtime Concerts have continued a productive partnership with the Cambridge Szeged Society in bringing in top-quality performers for these free Saturday concerts. The Early Music Recitals, organised by College Research Associate Dr Dan Tidhar (2011), have continued to make the most of our beautiful harpsichord and the Music and Madeira evenings have again drawn large audiences.

The Wolfson College Free Jam Society allows musicians to use a newly-acquired set of electric instruments. Several bands have formed from this project, playing gigs at Wolfson and elsewhere. Science! The Musical (pictured on p.25) also involved a host of Wolfson students.

The Choir has performed a wide variety of sacred and secular choral works at College Services and the Termly College concerts, and has been invited to perform at other events, including the University Sermon. This summer, the Wolfson Chamber Singers toured Southern France, hosted by Fellow Dr Conrad Guettler (1995) and his wife Judith Graham, performing Sacred Music in the historical churches of Minerve, Lagrasse and Rieux-Minervois in the Languedoc.

Notably, this year saw the acquisition of a Steinway piano, generously donated by Fellow Professor Linda Wicker (2007) and Senior Member Dr Roger Briscoe (2004). With all our performances at Wolfson, having a professional instrument has filled an important need. Our fundraising has proved successful in allowing for the transport, service and maintenance of the instrument to ensure that it is, and will remain, in peak condition. The College is enormously grateful to Linda and Roger, and to all members who have generously made gifts to the Piano Fund: the Steinway will serve Wolfson well for many years to come.
Ballroom Dancing Society

Susie Hoelgaard (1976), Senior Member and Organiser

The Ballroom Dancing Society has been at Wolfson since the early 1980s and I sometimes think it may be time to call it a day, but then every Michaelmas Term brings new enthusiasts. This year was no exception and another cohort arrived for weekly lessons with our charming teacher, Claire, and me assisting. We teamed up to initiate the novices in basic steps and routines, starting with the cha-cha and jive, and moving on to the waltz, quickstep and foxtrot. They all made rapid progress, with Claire nudging them gently along and me alternately humouring and bullying them into shape. I also encouraged them to mix and change partners so they would feel comfortable stepping out with others in social situations. Everyone enjoyed the sessions and our pupils seemed to respond well to our combined easy-going and more directive approach. So if the lessons continue to be popular next year, it looks like we’ll keep going.

One spin-off of the Society this season was offering some private tuition to several College couples who were getting married and wanted to prepare for their wedding dance. One couple, Clara and Stephen, kindly invited me and some of their fellow dancers along to their celebrations at St John’s. Here they are, showing off their elegant waltz on the College lawn!

Noodle Club

Corinne Duhig (1981), College Research Associate

The Noodle Club provides an opportunity for international students and visitors to practise their conversational English with native English speakers in a very relaxed and friendly environment.

Every Friday lunchtime, College provides instant noodles and snacks (kimchi is currently popular), coffee, teas and biscuits. We have a serious or fun theme or a media report to discuss and the conversation ranges round, on and off the subject – often we get so engrossed we don’t even start on it! We make friends and learn about everyone’s different languages and cultures.

Look out for the weekly notices and come and join us!
Senior Members

Neville Silverston (2004), Senior Member Observer

The two Senior Member Observers on the Governing Body have continued to organise social activities, not only to increase a corporate feeling within the Senior Membership, but also to integrate with Visiting Academics and Wolfson students. Senior Members organise three Tea Parties a year to welcome Visiting Academics, the last one of which is a Garden Party in the Easter Term.

On the last working day of every month during Term, Senior Members are encouraged to come in to College to enjoy eating with fellow Senior Members in the Dining Hall, where tables have been reserved. At our meeting following the last lunch of Term, a speaker, usually from the College, talks about the details of their role within the organisation.

A successful ‘Hospitality Scheme’ has been launched whereby Senior Members invite students to their homes during the Christmas vacation. Altogether, about 60 students were invited to a variety of social functions – morning coffee, afternoon tea, lunches, dinner and drinks parties.

Society of Emeritus Fellows

Tom Davies (1996), Secretary of the Society of Emeritus Fellows

Apart from the contribution to College life by individual Emeritus Fellows, the members of the Society like to emphasise that, collectively, their major strength is the comprehensive nature of their experience of Wolfson over its fifty-year life. In the past year this has been brought to bear on the College’s Statutes. Revision is as tedious as it is important but close examination, mainly by two Emeritus Fellows, helped produce a clear set of revisions.

Members of the Society will contribute to the 50th Anniversary celebrations as part of the efforts of all College members but, in particular, the Emeritus Fellows are taking the lead in producing a small illustrated book.

The Society continues to organise visits both inside Cambridge (museums and departments) and outside, and most of these are open to all College members. We have been to the Sainsbury Laboratory in Cambridge, several stately homes and various notable places in Whitehall. All of these have been very ably organised by Eric Miller.
Wolfson Howler

Kirsten Barnes (2009), Student

The Howler got off to a flying start with a ‘top-secret’ headline act at the first event. With a leak by The Tab, the queue for the show reached the car park. An incredible night of comedy headed by Russell Howard cemented the Howler’s reputation as the place to be for stand-up comedy in Cambridge.

The buzz surrounding the event lasted the year, due to the incredible headline acts, including Nick Mohammed, Romesh Ranganathan, John Kearns and Paul Sinha, and the strong crop of University student comedians such as Ken Cheng, Rosalind Peters, Harry Wright, Jamie Fraser, Bargav Narayanan, Adrian Gray, Ted Hill, Dan Eastment, Stephen Harrison and Tom McClelland. An increasing number of others, such as Jack Campbell, Andy Field, Ali Warwood and Victor Herrero, have greatly diversified the comedy. Special thanks to compères Ed Gamble and Nish Kumar.

The Howler has attracted the best acts and the friendliest audiences. Here’s to more amazing comedy at Wolfson!

Kevin Maloney (2012) and Michal Barabas (2013), Students and June Event Presidents

The 2014 Wolfson June Event offered 900 guests a taste of New York. With hot dogs in Coney Island, baseball in Queens and life drawing in NYU School of Arts, the party was a rousing success. After ambling past the Statue of Liberty, guests took photos in Central Park and danced the night away to the beats of 16 bands and DJs. After the arrival of a classic yellow NY taxi cab, ‘better than Trinity’ was on everyone’s lips. After nearly nine hours of non-stop food, drink and entertainment, over half the guests remained for the annual Survivor’s photo. The June Event Committee would like to thank Wolfson’s staff for their support through every step of the planning, and its guests, who made the night unforgettable. Ring True, Wolfson!
Art at Wolfson

Margaret Greeves (2006), Emeritus Fellow and Meredith Hale (2009), Fellow

Our 2013 exhibitions’ programme began with a popular show of original cartoons by Peter Brookes, principal cartoonist of The Times and Cartoonist of the Year in 2013. His trenchant political cartoons explored topical themes including the death of Nelson Mandela.

An exhibition from the College archive followed: Bredon House – the first 100 years; an online gallery and a seminar of reminiscences complemented this exhibition. We agreed to partner the Museum of Classical Archaeology in hosting a colourful, touring exhibition entitled Myths, Memories and Mysteries: how artists respond to the past (30 June-2 November). This exhibition of contemporary, mainly Greek, artists explores the influence of the past upon artists’ work. Taking Byzantine culture as its starting point, it covers a period from late antiquity to the twentieth century.

The College art collection is growing steadily with the gift of a print by Kip Gresham, of the Print Studio, and our commission to Peter Mennim to paint an oil sketch portrait of Professor Mary Hesse.

See www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/fine-arts for our online exhibitions.

Myths, Memories and Mysteries exhibition.

Professor Mary Hesse.
Law Society

Valia Babis (2009), Junior Research Fellow and Society President

This year we have been more active than ever, with a diverse series of topical seminars by prominent speakers. Professor Spyridon Flogaitis spoke of Greece’s weak public institutions and drew links with the current economic crisis; Professor Nina Persak dealt with the challenges of bringing legitimacy and trust in criminal justice; Mr Rod Thomas spoke on automated land registration systems and Professor Dr Kadriye Bakirci discussed the filtering mechanism of the European Court of Human Rights.

More broadly, legal scholars have presented Lunchtime Seminars and Humanities Society talks. Associate Professor Ramu de Bellescize discussed the difference between English and French law, and I spoke on reforming European financial regulation and supervision to prevent and resolve banking crises. Professor Flogaitis spoke again on the Roman tradition and rebirth of public powers in Europe.

In order to build stronger links between academia and practice, law students from Wolfson attended events sponsored by City firms. One of our aims is to promote links with practitioners for the benefit of Wolfson students considering a law career.

But the WLS is not just about work! Throughout the year, we held several social events, formal dinners and drink receptions. So, stay tuned!

Language and Culture Society

Varun Khanna (2010), Student and Society President

Wolfson is the most cosmopolitan College in Cambridge, and the Language and Culture Society aims to take advantage of this unique melting-pot of languages and cultures by offering College members a chance to learn or teach a language. For more information, please visit our website sites.google.com/site/wolfsonlcs

This year we continued to expand our culture aspect, hosting another two ‘Travellers’ Tales’ events in association with WCSA. We offered classes in Hebrew, Korean, Mandarin, Sanskrit and Swahili. We will continue exploring our language and culture frontiers, incorporating new languages and hosting more talks in the coming year.
Christian Society

Charlotte Matthews (2011), Student

The Wolfson Christian Society has had a packed year. We are a very diverse group, which is something we celebrate. We enjoyed reading Saint Mark’s Gospel together in Michaelmas, and in Lent we embarked on Saint Paul’s Letter to the Romans. In between our weekly Bible studies and prayer meetings, we also enjoyed hosting meals and evangelistic events. Tom Dennison gave a popular talk on ‘Does society’s view of Christianity reflect the truth?’ and we held a screening of ‘Nefarious: a merchant of souls’, a documentary highlighting the current problems of the global sex trade. We were pleased that our project to buy a goat and 20 pairs of shoes for primary school children with cerebral palsy in Kenya (organised by Alice Gathoni) was successful. We also had a pleasant morning cleaning the ‘Winter Comfort’ homeless shelter in Cambridge.

We meet every Wednesday evening at 9.30pm in the Lee Room during Term. Do feel free to join us! Next year the group will be led by Andy Gales: ag551@cam.ac.uk

Wolfson Contemporary Reading Group

Christine Corton (2010) and Kim Allen (2008), Senior Members

The WCRG meets throughout the year on Wednesday evenings and is open to all. Books discussed included Alice Munro’s short stories centred in a remote area of Canada, Dear Life, which garnered praise for its style but criticism for its unvaried content; slightly closer to home, Charles Moseley’s Out of Reach: An elegy for a Cambridgeshire Village sneaked into the reading group’s usually fiction-based territory because the author was able to come to the group to discuss the problems of writing a non-fiction biography of a village; and Ruth Ozeki’s A Tale for the time being and Jennifer Egan’s A Visit from the Goon Squad, which were both enjoyed for narratives that jumped across time and place. Andrea Levy’s The Long Song, set in the slave-owning states of the USA, failed to convince many readers that she had captured the authentic voice of the slaves. Nathan Filer’s The Shock of the Fall was compared unfavourably to Mark Haddon’s The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-time. John Williams’ re-discovered classic Stoner achieved high marks but was beaten by Robert Harris’ An Officer and a Spy, with a final score of 8.2: a resounding vote of confidence in Harris’ ability to spin a good yarn and, according to our visiting French historian, Dr Robert Priest, remarkably true to the actual events of the Dreyfus Case.
Wolfson Sports

Nikolas Mavreas (2013), Student and WCSA Sports Officer

Wolfson has had another successful year in sport. In American football, George Bickers took part in the Varsity Match. In Rugby Union, Sam Farmer competed in the University’s First 15 Blues in their Varsity Match at Twickenham, which our side unfortunately lost. In Rugby League, Tom Hughes played with the Green Lions in the 34th Varsity Match, sadly with the result again going in favour of The Other Place.

In tennis, Constantine Markides captained the University to its ninth win, earning his third Blue. He was awarded a grant from the Hawks Trust and he will also represent Cambridge and Oxford at the Prentice Cup tour of the US. And Wei-Hsin Chen gained a Half-Blue in table tennis.

Table Tennis

Varun Khanna (2010), Student and Team Captain, and Julian Conrad (2009), Student and Society President

It has been an extremely successful year for table tennis in Wolfson College: our First Team won the University Intercollegiate League (First Division) thanks to a particularly hard working team: Longzhu Cai, Wei-Hsin (Wilson) Chen, Premal Kamdar, Varun Khanna (Captain), Michael Wolfgang Müller and Kevin Schlegel (Coaches) and Julian Conrad (Society President). Our Second Team also took first place in the Fifth Division of the same League.

Wei-Hsin (Wilson) Chen, who contributed to Cambridge’s 10-0 victory in this year’s Varsity Match, will be awarded a Half-Blue. And as always, our Society is grateful for all the support received from the College.

Football

Alex Martin (2011), Student and Football Social Officer

By any measure, our football team should struggle. The yearly turnover of players and the omnipresent pressure of academic work should interrupt the stability and camaraderie necessary for sporting success. Yet we have not struggled. We have been victorious in every single League game we’ve played this year and have now been promoted to the highest levels of MCR football in Cambridge. Kind words of congratulations offered by everybody in College and their generous interest has spurred us on to excellence.

More like a family than a group of friends, neither injuries, essay deadlines nor the weather have prevented us from going out to eat together, or watching games in the Lee Room, or endlessly mocking the Social Officer for making a mess of his single chance to score.

The entire team thanks Alex Bergin for his excellent Captaincy. We would not have enjoyed this year’s success without him, and our best wishes go to Andy Gales who will be wearing the armband next season.

Saadiq Moledina (2012), Student and Club Captain

This year, the Squash team was one of the top eight teams in the University during both Michaelmas and Lent. We have had a mixed bag of results, with some incredibly tough matches. Unfortunately, injuries set in towards the end of Term and we were not quite able to finish with a flourish!

The popularity of our weekly coaching sessions has been steadily rising, with new recruits rapidly improving their game. This coming October, we are looking to attract more members, building on this year’s result and aiming for promotion.

Pradipta Biswas (2013), Junior Research Fellow and Captain

This year the Wolfson Cricket team has merged with the Trinity cricket team and already played a few friendly matches. Wolfson players put up a good show in the joint WolfTrin team. The MCR tournament matches have not been scheduled as I write this report, while the match against the President’s XI is scheduled for 29 June. (Sadly, the match was rained off) Notable performances so far are Kamlesh Pillay’s super-fast threatening bowling in nets, which is expected to claim many wickets over the summer, and skipper Biswas’ 13 runs against the mighty Jesus team, which turned out to be the best score after Extras.
Basketball

Tilman Lesch (2011) and Kevin Maloney (2012), PhD Students and Captains

This season has been the most successful in Wolfson’s basketball history. For the first time, our team is the winner of the Basketball Cuppers Championship. It also won its second consecutive League title and finished the season undefeated. The Cuppers finals took place in the University Sports Centre at the beginning of Easter Term against Pembroke College. The entire Wolfson team played some of their best basketball and the final score was 70 to 49.

As Captains, we would like to thank all players who have attended our weekly practices and supported our team in its games. With more than 15 members, the Wolfson team is one of the largest in Cambridge. Special thanks to the Bursar for a new outdoor hoop and to WCSA for covering the expense of our gym training sessions! We look forward to another successful year of Wolfson basketball. Go Wolfson, go!

Badminton

Joachim Dias (2012), Student and Men’s Team Captain

Badminton is a great team sport that requires complete concentration, mental and physical fitness, agility and precision. Whether playing competitively with our team or just in our social sessions, it is a great way to release pressure and get some exercise.

This year, our club dominated their Divisions in the College League. The men’s team won the Second Division in Michaelmas and came fourth out of seven in the First Division in Lent. The women’s team won the Third Division in Lent and moved up to Second Division. This is an unprecedented achievement for Wolfson, but it is still not good enough. That’s why we need you! If you can play badminton to a high standard, please get in touch with me at jovd2@cam.ac.uk to organise trials.
All the training takes place at the brand new University Sports Centre, with an excellent coach, and it’s completely free for Wolfson members! Our Facebook group, Wolfson College Badminton Club, also provides another platform for members to interact and socialise.

Aerobics, Zumba and Pilates
Zenobia Ismail (2013), Student and Jane Kloda (2012), College Research Associate
The Aerobics and Zumba Society offers three great ways to work-out in a non-competitive environment. Aerobics is a multi-level class combining dance, interval training and body conditioning. In Zumba the emphasis is on fun, easy-to-follow choreography. Both are set to great music. This year we added Pilates: a relaxing way to increase strength and flexibility as well as relieve neck and shoulder strain.

We would like you to drop your text books for an hour and break into a sweat because, as well as being tremendous fun, research suggests that exercise can improve academic performance by increasing blood flow to the brain, reducing stress and improving mood. Exercise can also help you sleep better and improve learning capacity.

All our classes are taught by professionals and are free for Wolfson members.

Other Sports
Other regular sports activities during the year not mentioned separately were Pool, Yoga, Salsa and Tango sessions.

Rowing
Nick Salisbury (2011), Student and Captain, Rhys Coleman (2011), Student and Men’s Captain, Lily Chan (2010), Student and Women’s Captain
Wolfson College Boat Club has enjoyed a very successful year, with three men’s crews training throughout the year. In Easter Term, our M3 narrowly missed out on competing in Bumps but W1 won the overall Mays category for the St Radegund Mile and took third place in their Division in the Cambridge Head to Head, followed by victories in the Champs Eight Head and Nine’s Regatta. These cemented their place in the Second Division.
M1 and M2 trained for the 7km Head of the River Race, but unfortunately the race was stopped due to high wind and tides causing boats to sink towards the finish line. The men competed in a number of races throughout Term, with M1 finishing second in the IM3 Division at Peterborough Regatta and winning their Division at the X-Press Head Race.

M2 kicked off May Bumps week with a strong start, securing a quick bump on Selwyn III on day one, followed by a row over on day two and quickly catching Downing III on day three. After a long chase on St Catharine’s III, M2 were unfortunately taken by surprise by a very fast St Edmund’s II hungry for blades and were over-bumped, putting them down one position from where they started.

For W1, day one got off to a very close start with Downing II just a canvas away from Lady Margaret II when W1 caught them, just 10 strokes ahead of their possible bump. Day two was a very fast bump on Lady Margaret II to secure more greenery and, keen to impress all the Wolfsonites at the marquee on day three, W1 quickly caught Clare II. The next day, Blades were secured after a quick and anti-climatic final bump on Robinson I. After again being denied a long, hard chase, W1 battle paddled home with glory and greenery, with the flag held up high.

M1 started off Bumps on a difficult position, chasing Darwin I who had the luxury of a slow-moving Pembroke II ahead of them. This forced a row-over; however, a quick bump on Pembroke II on day two was followed by a similarly fast bump on Sidney Sussex I on day three. Finally, Queens’ II were also bumped, giving M1 a solid up-three.

WOLFSON

A key aim of our 50th Anniversary Campaign is to increase financial support for our students. Below, some of them recount the ways in which grants and scholarships have made a difference to them. Thank you to all donors who have made this support possible.

Miss Nikita Appaswami (2013), Professor Sir David Williams Fund
I completed my undergraduate Law studies in India in 2013. The unique Master of Corporate Law programme at Cambridge was an ideal opportunity to further my interest in this dynamic field of commercial law. Being a David Williams Law Awardee eased much of the financial burden by funding a significant portion of the College fees. I am grateful and humbled to be selected for the award and would like to thank Wolfson for playing a key role in making my Cambridge experience a most memorable one, academically and socially.

Mr Gabriel Constantinescu (2013), Wolfson Cambridge Trust Scholarship
Just before starting my MPhil course in Physics last year, I was generously awarded a Wolfson Cambridge Trust Scholarship. This greatly-appreciated help from the College has allowed me to focus all my attention in pushing the boundaries of research in theoretical condensed matter physics. Through my work, I am striving to honour the benefactors who have given me a great chance to a bright future.

Mr Perica Hadzi-Jovancic (2012), President’s Scholarship
After completing my MPhil in Modern European History in June 2013, I continued with a PhD on the topic of the German-Yugoslav relations before the Second World War. Almost all of my primary sources are located in archives scattered around Germany and the former Yugoslavia, necessitating a number of research trips abroad. Without receiving the President’s Scholarship I could simply not afford this essential foreign travel, or expect to complete my PhD to the high standards set by the University of Cambridge.
Mr Kai Yuan (Danny) Huang (2013), Yidi Lu Scholarship

Last October I started on the MPhil in Physics (by research) course at Cambridge. I was delighted to be given the opportunity to conduct research at the Cavendish Laboratory, one of the most prestigious physics laboratories in the world. However, being a self-funded student, finance has always been one of my concerns. I am truly thankful to Wolfson for supporting me through a generous scholarship that has covered some of my expenses, and has really allowed me to focus on my research.

Mr Guanchen Lai (2013), Yidi Lu Scholarship

I began my MPhil course in Modern South Asian Studies in October 2013 and greatly appreciate that the College generously granted me a Yidi Lu Scholarship, which reduces the financial burden for me and for my family. With the help of the College I am able to concentrate more on my studies and participate in various activities. I am extremely thankful to Wolfson for offering me the opportunity to join this vigorous and hospitable society.

Mr Massimiliano Lehnus (2013), Roger Needham Award

After studying genetics in the USA and nanotechnology in London, then co-founding an e-health startup, commencing my PhD studies here at Wolfson has been the culmination of my interests. I am developing a portable lab-on-a-chip diagnostic biosensor and I hope to turn this project into a business reality after my PhD. I am so very grateful to have been selected for a Roger Needham Award, which has allowed me to make the most of everything that Wolfson and Cambridge have to offer.

Miss Sahar Mansoor (2013), Santander Universities Scholarship and Wolfson College Travel Grant

I am currently pursuing my MPhil in environmental policy at Wolfson. Every time I walk across College, I am reminded in my heart and mind of the strong sense of community and opportunity that surrounds me. I am so grateful to Santander Universities for helping my dream of attending the University of Cambridge to become a reality! I am also very thankful for the Wolfson College Travel Grant that allowed me to conduct my fieldwork on the role of mobile phone technology in urban planning and policy in Bangalore, India.
The Morrison Society

The Morrison Society, named after the College's first President, John Morrison, was established in 2008 for all those who notify us that they have included a legacy to Wolfson College in their Will. Members' names are displayed in a special commemorative book and we are delighted to invite Society members to our annual Commemoration of Benefactors’ Dinner, to show our appreciation during their lifetime for this important commitment. We are grateful to the following, as well as to those members who prefer to belong anonymously to the Society.

Obituaries

Dr Colin Lachlan Forbes
Fellow
22 November 1922 – 12 May 2014

Dr Forbes was a Fellow of Wolfson College from 1980-1983 and an eminent geologist. He served with the Royal Engineers in Ayr and India.

During his career he was Curator of the Sedgwick Museum, a University Lecturer and geological consultant to the Cambridge Water Company. He was responsible for siting new boreholes that continue to provide Cambridge’s reliable water supply. Dr Forbes was on the board of Cambridge Water from 1985 until 1996, when it became a PLC. He was an alumnus of Clare College and Elizabeth de Clare Fellow from 2010.

Professor (Ernest) Stewart Lee
Emeritus Fellow
7 June 1934 – 15 October 2013

Stewart Lee received his Bachelor and Master’s degrees from McGill University and his PhD from the University of Toronto. He became a full Professor in both Electrical Engineering and Computer Science in 1975 and was influential in incorporating software engineering into what had been an electrical engineering department.

Professor Lee’s research covered a wide range of topics in the area of computer software and computer networks. He was a dedicated teacher and researcher, with many patents to his name. He was elected as a Chartered Engineer and a Fellow of the Institution of Electrical Engineers and of the British Computer Society.

In 1996 he was elected a Fellow of Wolfson College alongside his Professorial appointment at the University, which he very much enjoyed. On retirement, he became an Emeritus Fellow and returned to his native Canada to pursue his love of country life.
Dr (Ronald) Stuart McGregor
Emeritus Fellow
24 October 1929 – 19 August 2013

Gordon Johnson

He was appointed as a Lecturer in Hindi at the Faculty of Oriental Studies and became a Fellow of Wolfson College in 1980. He devised an option in the Tripos that allowed candidates to combine study of language with modern Indian History. There was a steady stream of rather unconventional undergraduates taking the course which became the pre-cursor of the current MPhil in South Asian Studies. He was a dedicated teacher and, beneath a shy exterior, had an unassuming and warm sense of humour. He became a University Reader at a time when such a promotion was not part of regular professional progress but a mark of particularly distinguished contribution to scholarship. He became an Emeritus Fellow on his retirement in 1997.

The Reverend Professor Ernest Wilson Nicholson DD FBA
Honorary Fellow
26 September 1938 – 22 December 2013

Gordon Johnson
Ernest Nicholson was a leading Old Testament scholar of his generation. At school in Ireland, and then Trinity College Dublin, he wrote his PhD thesis for Glasgow University. His first appointment was in Hebrew and Semitic Languages at TCD, and from there he came as the first Visiting Fellow of University College. He had fondest memories of the College in the pioneering days of the 1960s. While on his sabbatical, out of the blue, but in a brown paper envelope (as he told the story), he was amazed to receive a letter from the University Registrary appointing him to a lectureship in Divinity in Cambridge – a post he had neither known about nor applied for. He returned for a Term to Dublin and then in October 1967 settled in Cambridge where, until he moved to Pembroke to be its Chaplain in 1969, he was a Fellow of the College and threw himself wholeheartedly into its early development. He subsequently, in 1979, became the Oriel Professor of the Interpretation of Holy Scripture, and then Provost of Oriel College, Oxford, from 1990 until retirement in 2003. He was a devoted enthusiast for Wolfson, right from his first encounter with University College in 1966. After his election as an Honorary Fellow in 1992, Ernest missed few opportunities to visit the College when in Cambridge. He was tremendously good company and the College was fortunate to include him among its members.
Mr John Michael Sharman MBE
Emeritus Fellow
17 September 1933 – 20 December 2013

Tom Ridgman

Mike Sharman became a Fellow of Wolfson in 1982 and an Emeritus Fellow in 1996. After graduating in engineering from St John’s College Cambridge, his initial career included roles in the de Havilland aircraft company, technical journalism and as a lecturer at Hatfield Polytechnic. In 1966, he was recruited as Founding Director of Cambridge’s Advanced Course in Production Methods and Management (ACPMM). He designed and developed this course using a range of radical and innovative methods that focused on experiential learning through short industrial placements and a wide range of factory visits.

The Course was very successful, with many of the participants going on to leading positions in industry, never forgetting the high standards that Mike insisted on. These included not only approaches to problem-solving but also dress code and punctuality. While the Course has evolved over the years into the current ISMM, Mike’s philosophy still sets its core values and many of his ideas have now been taken up in mainstream engineering education. He was awarded the MBE in 1994 for services to engineering education.

Mike was an avid collector and, in addition to his collection of Course memorabilia, he had a collection of railway artifacts and was a national expert on historic railway lamps, which he was pleased to show off to visitors. His railway benches adorn Wolfson’s Lee Room.

Dr Frank Peter Whitford
Senior Member
11 August 1941 – 11 January 2014

Professor Sir Richard Evans

Frank Whitford became a Senior Member of Wolfson College in 1985. He was raised in Hampshire and went to Wadham College, Oxford, where he neglected his studies in favour of other pursuits, teaching himself to draw and working on student dramatic productions, films and magazines. After graduating in English language and literature in 1963 he pursued his real passion: modern German art. In 1965, he obtained a diploma in the History of Art at the Courtauld Institute followed by a degree in Art History from the Free University Berlin in 1969.

He became a Lecturer in the History of Art first at UCL, and then at Homerton College, Cambridge. When the department at Homerton was closed, he worked freelance as a Tutor at the Royal College of Art, where he was awarded a higher doctorate.
Frank also worked on and off as a cartoonist for daily papers. You could always recognise his cartoons because, as he explained, he could not draw feet and left them below the frame-line or disguised them in shapeless Doc Martens-style boots. Frank published his cartoons sometimes under the name Rausch, the German for ‘intoxication’ – he was indeed a bon vivant, and described his principal recreation in one biographical dictionary as ‘cooking’.

His research work in Berlin, Dresden and Dessau led to numerous articles on modern German art, and short introductory books on Expressionism, Egon Schiele, the Bauhaus, Understanding Abstract Art and a substantial biography of Oskar Kokoschka. He was always close not only to early twentieth-century Central European art but also to the artists of his own generation, many of whom he knew well.

Frank enjoyed the informality and community spirit of Wolfson College, and played a key role on its Fine Arts Committee, using his many contacts to help it put on exciting exhibitions of work by living artists. The many exhibitions he curated included works by Paolozzi at the Tate and Pop Art in England at the Kunstverein Hamburg; he was an adviser to the Nationalgalerie in Berlin for an exhibition of the work of Ernst Ludwig Kirchner. In 2002 he was awarded the Federal Cross of the Order of Merit by the German government.

Several years ago his wife Cici (Cecilia) Dresser was seriously injured in a car accident and has been cared for in a nursing home, which Frank visited almost daily.

Professor Leslie Zines AO

Honorary Fellow

12 December 1930 – 31 May 2014

Lady Sally Williams

Leslie Zines was an outstanding Australian Constitutional lawyer. He graduated from Sydney University in 1952, qualified as a barrister, worked in the Commonwealth Attorney-General’s Department and spent two years at Harvard University before joining the Faculty of Law at the Australian National University (ANU), Canberra in 1962 and becoming Professor in 1967. In 1992 he was awarded the Order of Australia for services to the legal system.

Leslie first visited Cambridge in the late 1970s and joined Wolfson in 1988, a direct result of his long friendship with Professor David Williams, the then-President of the College. The friendship had begun in Australia in 1967 when Zines succinctly (and correctly) advised that David’s next sabbatical should be at ANU. David was delighted to be able to offer similarly direct advice about colleges to Leslie 20 years later. Leslie was made an Honorary Fellow of Wolfson in 1995, and he visited the College several times thereafter, lastly in 2011.

Leslie had met Judith Wilson, the love of his life, shortly after moving to Canberra. Judith helped Leslie in his work and, when he returned to Cambridge as the Goodhart Professor of Law in 1992, they enjoyed being generous hosts in the Goodhart Lodge and part of the Wolfson Fellowship. Judith was by Leslie’s side when he died after some years battling cancer.

He was immensely popular with fellow academics, students and friends’ young children, whom he always treated as adults.

Gordon Johnson adds:
Professor Zines was a member of the Faculty of Law, ANU, for 30 years and taught mainly on the subject of Commonwealth Constitutional Law and the Law of Trusts. His chief research interests were in Australian and comparative and constitutional law, federalism and the European Union. His published works include The High Court and the Constitution (4th edn 1997), Constitutional Change in the Commonwealth (1991), Federal Jurisdiction in Australia (2nd edn 1978) (jointly) as well as other books, articles and chapters.

Besides being such a good academic lawyer, Leslie was also a great conversationalist, full of witty anecdotes and unlikely stories: an enlivening presence at Formal Hall. He is remembered at Wolfson with affection and the College values the part he played in its life.

New Fellows 2013–2014

Ms Valia Babis is a Junior Research Fellow in Law. Her expertise covers financial regulation and supervision, crisis management and resolution of banks. Valia completed her LLM and PhD at Wolfson and attended Harvard Law School. Previously, Valia worked in the banking division of an international law firm.

Dr Niladri Banerjee is a Postdoctoral Research Associate in the Department of Materials Science and Metallurgy. His research focuses on the experimental investigations of the coupling of superconductivity and magnetism in nanoscale devices.

Dr Pradipta Biswas works at the Engineering Design Centre, where he investigates human machine interaction issues for end-users with diverse backgrounds ranging from Indian farmers to Eurofighter Typhoon pilots. He completed his PhD in Computer Science at the Computer Laboratory and Trinity College in 2010.

Dr Nicholas Carroll is a consultant gastrointestinal radiologist specialising in endoscopic ultrasound. He qualified from Cambridge University and Kings College Hospital, and trained in radiology at Addenbrooke’s Hospital. He undertook a Fellowship in gastrointestinal imaging at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, has developed the EUS service for the Eastern region and is currently the President of the UK EUS user group.

Dr Rafael Castrejón-Pita is an Isaac Newton Trust Fellow in Engineering. His research interests include fluid dynamics, liquid breakup, drop formation and impact. He has an MSc from the National University of Mexico and PhD from Imperial College. Rafa joined Wolfson in 2007 and supervises Mathematical Methods for Part 1A and 1B students.

Dr Carmine D’Agostino is a Lecturer at the Department of Chemical Engineering and Biotechnology. His research focuses on heterogeneous catalysis and porous media for catalytic applications, including those relevant to the field of Sustainable Chemistry.

Professor Christi Deaton is the Florence Nightingale Foundation Professor of Clinical Nursing Research in the Department of Public Health and Primary Care. Her research interests include physical activity as therapy for people with heart failure and other long-term conditions, adherence to physical activity, patient self-management, palliative care in long-term conditions, cardiovascular prevention and nurse-led services.

Professor Simon Griffin is Professor of General Practice, Group Leader at the Medical Research Council Epidemiology Unit, Deputy Director of CEDAR (the UKCRC Public Health Centre of Excellence for Diet and Activity Research), Honorary Professor of General Medical Practice at Aarhus University Denmark, Honorary Consultant at Cambridge University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust and an assistant General Practitioner at Lensfield Medical Practice. His research aims to reduce the growing burden of diabetes, obesity and related metabolic disorders.

Dr Peter Jönsson is a Postdoctoral Research Associate at the Department of Chemistry. His research involves development of new methods to study and manipulate single molecules in the membrane of living cells. A particular area of interest to Dr Jönsson is the interaction and spatial organisation of molecules in the cell membrane of cells involved in the adaptive immune system.

Professor Tahir Kamran is the Allama Iqbal Fellow and works at the Centre of South Asian Studies as an historian of South Asia, with a special research interest in Islamic movements in the early modern and modern periods. He has published on sectarian violence and religious extremism in Pakistan and its transnational impact.

Dr Claudio Köser is a postdoctoral scientist at the Department of Medicine. His main interest is to harness the recent advances in DNA sequencing to accelerate the diagnosis of drug-resistant tuberculosis and infection control in general.

Professor Alexei Lapkin is a Professor of Sustainable Reaction Engineering in the Department of Chemical Engineering and Biotechnology. He is interested in new ways of producing chemicals using industries that do not compromise on safety, environmental and sustainability impacts.

Mr Povilas Lastauskas is a College Teaching Officer and Director of Studies in Economics. His research focuses on modelling global economic interactions both in time and in space, mainly manifesting through international trade, technology diffusion and production factor movements (which include labour, capital, other non-tangible factors such as ideas, and entrepreneurship).

Dr Ella McPherson is an ESRC Future Research Leader Fellow at the Department of Sociology and a Research Associate of the Centre of Governance and Human Rights. Her research on social media use at human rights organisations and on human rights reporting at Mexican newspapers is concerned with pluralism and accountability in the context of digital and democratic transitions. She received her PhD in Sociology in 2010 and previously was a Teaching Fellow in the London School of Economics’ Department of Media and Communications.

Mr Paul Mylrea was appointed the University’s Director of Communications in September 2013. He has previously held communications roles at Oxfam, Transport for London, the Department for International Development and the BBC, and was a foreign correspondent for Reuters. Paul is a Chartered Manager and has been an Associate Lecturer at the Open University Business School. He is a past President and Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Public Relations and a Visiting Fellow at Bournemouth University’s Media School.

Dr Lee Roberts is the Elsie Widdowson Fellow at the Medical Research Council Human Nutrition Research Unit. His research focuses on metabolism and the phenotypes and mechanisms of metabolic disease. Following completion of his PhD he was awarded the Leducq Foundation Career Development Award to conduct postdoctoral research at Massachusetts General Hospital, Harvard Medical School.

Dr Sue Swaffield studied part-time at Wolfson for an MEd and a PhD. She is a Senior Lecturer at the Faculty of Education, works closely with the University of Cape Coast in Ghana on a professional development programme for school leaders and is an Adjunct Research Fellow at the Griffith Institute for Educational Research, Brisbane. Her research and teaching interests include leadership and assessment for learning.

Mr Jamie Trinidad is a Junior Research Fellow who conducts research in the fields of public international law, constitutional law and human rights. He has a particular interest in self-determination issues, territorial disputes and the constitutional arrangements of British Overseas Territories. He is also a practising barrister.

Dr Jan Vermunt is Professor of Education and Deputy Head at the Faculty of Education. He is a psychologist who seeks to understand how people learn and differ in their pathways to growth and development.

Dr James Westbrook is a postdoctoral organologist whose particular interest is in guitar construction. He was awarded Wolfson’s O’May Studentship for his doctoral research into Guitar Making in Nineteenth-Century London at the Music Faculty. Currently, he is investigating the life and work of the musical instrument maker David ‘Jose’ Rubio. He is also a consultant for Brompton’s, musical instrument auctioneers in Mayfair and a part-time luthier and restorer.

When arriving by car, please note that the Main Entrance to the College is on Barton Road, not Selwyn Gardens as shown on some maps and satellite navigation systems. Directions may be found at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/directions

Accommodation
The College is sometimes able to offer overnight accommodation to members. Enquiries about the availability of guest rooms should be made in the first instance to the Accommodation Administrator at accommodation@wolfson.cam.ac.uk

Dining arrangements
All members (including alumni) are welcome to participate in College functions and come to lunch, supper and formal dinners in College (including Guest Night) at their own expense as often as they wish, with up to three guests. Informal meals are paid for with a Catering Card, available from the Porters’ Lodge.

Formal Hall is held on Tuesdays from 2 September 2014 to 14 July 2015 and on Fridays in Full Term: please note that there is no

Formal Hall during the Christmas/Easter breaks: see below for Term dates. Bookings should be made online by noon on the day prior to Formal Hall (or earlier) at www.FormalHall.wolfson.cam.ac.uk

Bookings for Guest Night should be made at least two weeks in advance, via email to guest-night@wolfson.cam.ac.uk. Members may use the Bar and Club Room, the Karen Spärck Jones Room, the Combination Room, the Lee Room and the Dining Hall.

Please let the Alumni Office (alumni@wolfson.cam.ac.uk) know if you are planning to visit the College: they would be delighted to see you.

Term dates
This year’s dates for Full Term are:
- Michaelmas: 7 October to 5 December 2014
- Lent: 13 January to 13 March 2015
- Easter: 21 April to 12 June 2015

For a full list of Term dates in future years, visit www.cam.ac.uk/univ/termdates.html

Please send any recent news which you would like to share with your fellow Wolfson members to communications@wolfson.cam.ac.uk
Your news may be included in the next issue of the Wolfson Review or on the College website at www.WolfsonPlus.com

Banks and Building Societies may not accept Direct Debit Instructions for some types of account.

Note for UK tax payers

The College can reclaim the basic rate UK tax paid on all gifts within the past 4 years. This means that every £100 donated is worth £125 and the difference is paid by HMRC, at no cost to you. Please complete your full name and home address details on the previous page and sign the declaration below to make this possible.

I would like Wolfson College to treat all donations I have made in the past 4 years, and all donations I make from the date of this declaration until I notify you otherwise, as Gift Aid donations.

Signature: ___________________________ Date: ___________________

Notes:

• You must pay an amount of UK income tax and/or capital gains tax at least equal to the tax that all Charities or Community Amateur Sports Clubs that you donate to will reclaim on your donations in the tax year (currently 25p for each £1.00 that you give). Other taxes such as VAT and Council Tax do not qualify.

• If you pay tax at the higher rate, you can claim further tax relief in your Self Assessment tax return.

• Please notify the College if you change your name or address.

• You can cancel this declaration at any time by notifying the College.

• If you are unsure whether your donations qualify for Gift Aid tax relief or you have any queries regarding this Gift Aid declaration, please contact:
